Explorer's Diary

Listen to or read the story of one of the early Antarctic pioneers who struggled to explore Antarctica. Many of the details of these stories are known because explorers kept diaries—records of their day-to-day lives.

Imagine you are in one of the parties of explorers that set out to reach the South Pole about one hundred years ago. Make a diary entry that tells of what you did and saw on one day. You might like to put a drawing in, too.

Hint: diaries usually start with the date and are written using 'I', as you tell your story.
